Local police were sent on a manhunt Friday afternoon when an inmate escaped while being transported.

Frankie Scott Young, 43, of Leighton Road, was arrested by Estill County Sheriff's Deputy Russell "Doc" Morris and Sherriff Gary Freeman at Old Pike at around 4 p.m. Friday after police searched the Irvine area for approximately an hour.

Young had been in court Friday and was being transported back to the Powell County Jail when he ran off.

Young was arrested in August by Morris and Freeman and charged with first degree burglary.

Doug and Lisa Pinion of Barnes Mountain Road reported to the ECSO when they returned home from a business trip their home had been ransacked and "nearly all of their belongings were taken."

Young took 14 guns, drywall electrical wiring and fixtures and other household items including a 55" television, jewelry, knives and washer and dryer.

The total value of the property damaged and stolen in the burglary was estimated to exceed $150,000.

The Pinions advertised a $500 reward for information that would lead to Young's arrest.

For fleeing last week, Young is charged with second degree escape, a Class D felony.

Irvine City Council members met in special session last week to vote to approve a bid to purchase the old city hall building.

Roger Purdy of Gainesville, Texas placed a bid for $25,300 for the property.

Purdy has been represented by local realtor Willis Estes Realty for four years.

He has plans to renovate the property to use the upper level of the property for three or four apartments and the first floor as office space.

Purdy owns four farms in Estill County and a property in Richmond that his brother runs.

Several council members met with Purdy to discuss the property and said he is interested in making the property productive again.

Councilman Tobo Bryant said he went by the property Purdy owns in Richmond and was pleased with the appearance. Purdy has paid $2,500 as a down payment on the property and is waiting to have the building inspected and checked for asbestos. Pending the results of the inspections, he will make the official purchase of the property. Councilwoman Nelle Williams expressed concern about the purchase. She wanted to ensure the council members who met with Purdy felt confident the sale of the building to him was the best decision. Farmer said he thinks the purchase is beneficial for the city. "If he'll take the building and make it productive, it's a win, win situation for the city," he said. Bryant, who previously suggested demolishing the building and creating parking, said after meeting with Purdy, hearing the proposal and seeing his other property, he has changed his opinion about the property. "I'm changing gears here about tearing the property down," he said. "He seems legit."

Now is the time to build good journalists

I recently had a conversation with a new friend about how blessed I feel at my job. I am one of the lucky few who can say they are pursuing the career they have always wanted.

My passion for writing began when I was younger just keeping journals.

Initially my interest was sparked by my love for reading.

My passion was taken to the next level in high school when I joined the staff of the school newspaper.

Within the first semester, I was hooked. I quickly realized I had a talent for writing, interviewing and story ideas.

I was very lucky to have a journalism teacher who was invested me as a student and a reporter. She took the extra step necessary to make me feel confident journalism was something I could do as a career.

The times I spent working on my high school newspaper are some of my favorite high school memories. My time learning about the trade in high school is the sole reason I was able to decide as a freshman in college what my major would be.

I never switched or swapped majors and I was able to complete my degree in exactly four years because of my intense passion.

Since high school, I have become invested in how important newspapers are to communities, particularly those the size of Irvine and Ravenna. I have also become passionate about encouraging young people to become involved in journalism in one way or another.

I was so excited when I worked here in the past to see the Engineer Express printed in the Citizen Voice & Times monthly. I loved reading what the students were writing about.

High school newspapers aren't only great for helping students learn more about the profession, they are a resource for the community.

High school reporters are able to capture the realities of what students in our school system are facing better than I would ever be able to.

They are also able to pinpoint for the community what they find important in their school.

I have come to understand the CV&T and its owners and publishers have had a long history of encouraging young people to get involved in journalism. For several years high school students have worked here as sports writers, photographers, advertisement designers, etc.

I was sad to see the Engineer Express stop printing.

However, I was excited last week when we had a student from Estill County Middle School in the office to job shadow.

She told us that all students at the middle

"If we want honest, committed and good journalism to continue, we have to start raising the next generation of those types of journalists."

school take journalism as an exploratory course. She had recently been named editor in chief of the paper and already had ideas about how to better serve the students.

She wanted to print more stories about under-covered extracurriculars like the academic team and future problem solving team.

I was ecstatic that she was eager to make changes and even though I felt like her time at the office was probably boring, she kept saying she was having a good time.

A community journalism course I took while I was at Eastern Kentucky University required the students to do an extensive project.

My classmates and I chose to research the importance of newspapers in education and journalism courses in middle schools and high schools.

I was surprised to find some counties have newspapers in even their elementary schools.

The CV&T and other newspapers across the state will begin running a series titled "Unleashed: A Kentucky Adventure" as part of the Newspapers in Education campaign this week. The series is sponsored by the Kentucky Press Association.

Three-hundred Estill County students will get free scrap books to piece together the 10-week's worth of chapters of the story. There are also activities available online at kypress.com.

I encourage parents of young children to have your kids read this content that is geared specifically to them. It's a great way to encourage newspaper readership and literacy.

I realize that not everyone in the community sees the value of the newspaper in the same way I do. But, I want to extend the opportunity to any students who are interested in job shadowing or talking to our staff about a career in journalism to contact us.

Our office is always in a state of craze preparing for the next issue, but I think being exposed to a newspaper office is the best way to get students minds moving and their passion for the industry sparked.

If we want honest, committed and good journalism to continue in Estill County we have to start raising the next generation of those types of journalists.

House fire shows little respect for property, feelings of others

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T Staff Writer

Last week I took a photo of the house that burned at Wagersville which was only a mile or so up the road from where I live.

There was no one else around at the time, and as I stood there on that hill beside the smoking ruins of the old house that was a neighborhood landmark, I had to blink away a few tears.

It felt like there'd been a death.

The air was too still as I watched a few flames still flickering among the rubble, while smoke wafted sadly toward the heavens.

I had admired that old house all my life. One of my grandmothers used to call it "the prettiest place on the creek." My girls and their friends and cousins all used to say they wanted to live there when they grew up.

Those were my memories of the place just as one who frequently drove by. I can only imagine what the loss meant to the family who owned it.

Now there's nothing left but two tall chimneys which look as straight and sturdy as the day they were built.

The cause of the fire is "suspicious." There were no storms in the area that night, no wiring to misfire, no one living there to leave a candle burning.

The news called it an "old abandoned farmhouse," but that's not exactly true.

While no one currently lives there, the owners had kept the grass mowed and the exterior of the house painted. They had tried to keep it wired, but thieves stripped that out twice.

The house was obviously still important to the owners, or they wouldn't have made the effort to maintain it.

Is it any wonder? The owner's husband was born and raised there, as was his father. The oldest part of the house was almost 200 years old.

Regardless of the value of the property, the real issue is that someone had no respect for another's property or feelings. Someone didn't care who they hurt or what they destroyed.

The two tall chimneys standing there brought to my mind an image of the Twin Towers before they fell to terrorist attacks on 9/11. It's hard to believe this week marks the eleventh anniversary of that fateful day.

I remember clearly how the news rocked our world.

That September 11 was a beautiful day here in Kentucky as well as in New York City, the sky blue and bright, just like the days we've been enjoying this week.

The contrast between the beauty of the day and the horror of the attacks made them even more unsettling.

Violent and destructive acts, whether of great consequence or not, seem random and senseless to most of us. We just cannot understand why people do these things.

It's frustrating when justice is slow to come, or, as in many cases, seems to never come.

Items are swiped from peoples' homes and garages all the time. Gas stations are robbed, and law-abiding citizens live in fear. Sometimes it seems that lawlessness rules.

Jails are crowded and the court system is overwhelmed with wrongdoers, so that some criminals do not get what they deserve. That's frustrating to law-abiding citizens.

Sometimes it's very hard to pray for the people who steal and destroy, although I believe it is the right thing to do.

Ultimately though, the criminals who seem to get away with a lot are to be pitied, because there are other laws at work. Call them the laws of nature, karma, or the laws of God, but I believe what goes around comes around. Sooner or later, people reap the consequences of the deeds they've done.

Justice may not be swift, but it will come—eventually.

If Osama bin Laden were alive today, he could vouch for that.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,

Ravenna has the highest insurance premium tax in the state of Kentucky.

The tax is on your homeowners, motor vehicle and health insurance.

The tax rate is set by the Ravenna City Council.

After the rate is set, the city notifies the Kentucky Department of Insurance. The department of insurance notifies all the insurance companies that do business in Kentucky of the rates set by the local governments.

Ravenna's rate is 15 percent. The insurance companies then add 2.24 percent to the local government's rate which makes the rate for Ravenna 17.24 percent, which increases your premium by that amount.

Only two cities have higher motor vehicle taxes than Ravenna. The rate for Ravenna is 50 cents on each $100 of vehicle value. Ravenna is more than twice the state average of 24.5 cents.

Out of 407 cities that levy real estate taxes, only four have higher taxes than Ravenna.

The rate for Ravenna is 50 cents on each $100 of real estate value. The average for the state is 21.8 cents.

I feel that the citizens are overtaxed and underserved by the city. It will be hard for the citizens to move forward because of our high taxes.

Sincerely,
William C. Van Cleve

Fain, Winkler named Sen. Jeff Green Scholars

Shelby Fain and Justin Winkler of Estill County High School have been named Sen. Jeff Green Scholars by the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA) for their outstanding academic performance in high school. Students earn this designation by achieving a 4.0 grade point average each year of high school and scoring at least a 28 composite on the ACT.

These students have also earned $2,500 a year in Kentucky Educational Excellence Scholarship (KEES) awards. Their awards may be renewed each year of college if they continue high scholastic achievement, making the total value of their KEES worth $10,000.

The title honors the late state Sen. Jeff Green of Mayfield, who served in the Kentucky General Assembly from 1992 to 1997.

Columnist says grandson continues to make gains at home

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T Staff Writer

I think nearly everyone is enjoying the gorgeous fall-like weather of the past few days. The good soaking rains we had last week were just what our greens and turnip patch needed, but to all that stuffy humidity, I say “Good riddance!”

I like to walk regularly for health benefits, but when the air is thick with humidity, walking becomes so much more of a chore.

The past few days, though, it has been a pleasure. The air feels nice and crisp and the September sky is a perfect shade of blue. Fall wildflowers are blooming at their peak, providing a treat for the eyes.

There’s more to be loving about life than the latest weather, however.

Our little grandson Clay is continuing to do very well at home. The past couple of months have simply flown by, but during that time our boy has managed to gain about seven pounds and has grown several inches longer. In fact, he’s now “off the charts” as far as his height is concerned, and he’s at about 95 percentile for his weight. Our sweet baby Clay is looking less like a baby every day, and more like a great big boy.

He’s had a couple of appointments with his doctors from UK lately, and it appears that not only is our boy growing fast on the outside, but his lungs are continuing to grow and develop. His pulmonologist thinks Clay is ready for some trial runs off the ventilator.

That means yet another piece of equipment was delivered to the house, this one with one hose instead of two. The machine will provide just a small amount of humidity and a tiny bit of extra oxygen.

The doctor recommended that Clay have trials off the ventilator for 30 minutes twice per day with those sessions to be lengthened as he tolerates them or until he’s completely off the ventilator when he’s awake.

Although these steps are small and cautious, they are still exciting steps toward him being able to breathe on his own. Our boy is making progress, and we are thankful for every bit of growth and change in the right direction.

Clay is still being fed entirely through the G-J tube and will most likely continue to be until he’s at least a year old. That’s OK--we’ll work on one thing at a time.

These are just some of the physical changes that are taking place. While our boy is growing, he’s also becoming more and more fun to be around. He loves to play peek-a-boo and be read to. He likes to smile and make faces at himself in the mirror.

Being that seriously cute, is it any wonder?

Clay waves “bye-bye” at visitors, and he has also learned that Mommy will come running if he coughs a little.

A lady from First Steps came to evaluate him for their program the other day, and she seemed amazed at how observant Clay is and how he interacts with others socially. She said she didn’t think she’d ever seen a baby with a more expressive face.

I suppose that comes from all the time he was unable to do anything but study the faces of those who hovered near his bedside—family, nurses and other medical staff. We still stand around him a lot, gawking and grinning like a bunch of apes.

We’re just really glad to have him home.

Birthday celebration is ‘big hit’ with 90-year-old and former teacher

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T Staff Writer

It’s not every day that a former school teacher lives long enough to attend the 90th birthday party of a former student, but 98-year-old Hickman Patrick was able to do just that Sept. 2 when family and friends threw a party for Anna Liza Tipton at Salem Baptist Church.

“We had a fine birthday party,” said Patrick, who taught Anna Liza at the Twin Creek one-room school back in the 1930s.

The pair had only seen each other a couple of times since their school days, but Patrick says that he “recognized her in a little while.”

Patrick’s daughter, Frances Clark, said the pair “had a ball” at the party.

In fact, Anna Liza is a huge fan of Cincinnati Red’s baseball, so her children planned her party accordingly. They served a white baseball-shaped cake trimmed in red and decorated tables with peanuts, popcorn and Cracker jacks. In lieu of a guest book, approximately 92 guests signed a Louisville Slugger baseball bat.

Hickman Patrick and Anna Liza Tipton

Guests sang “Take Me Out to the Ballgame” instead of the traditional Happy Birthday song at Anna Liza’s request.

Perhaps her love of the sport stems from the days when Patrick would dismiss class early on Friday afternoons so the students could play baseball in the school yard.

“We didn’t know three strikes was an out. We just kept swinging until we hit the ball and then we ran like heck,” said Anna Liza.

Both recalled that a lot of things were different in those days. Utilities were supplied by “a water bucket and a coal bucket,” said Patrick.

“I was my own janitor,” he said.

Sometimes he gave students who lived close to the school a dime to arrive early and build a fire in the mornings.

School supplies were scarce and had to be borrowed from the school board. Patrick’s daughter said he was particularly thrilled about getting a globe and maps because “not every school had access to those.”

At the end of the school year, the supplies had to be returned. Students, including Anna Liza, helped gather up and carry supplies to Patrick’s Model A Ford, which he had to leave parked by Hwy. 82 about two miles from the school.

Anna Liza and Patrick both recalled an abbreviated school year. Patrick said classes lasted from July to December.

“That was during the Great Depression. There wasn’t enough money to pay us to teach more than that,” he said.

Patrick was one of several teachers to be emergency-certified to teach by Superintendent Mamie Scott although they had not yet met degree requirements.

After Christmas breaks, Patrick went to college during the spring. He completed a social studies degree from Union College, and then later earned an agriculture degree from UK when he graduated in 1942.

He taught at several one room schools, at Hargett Consolidated School and finally at Lee and Owsley County high schools until he retired in 1980. His career spanned more than 48 years.

Since retiring, Patrick has had the opportunity to travel.

“I’ve been to Japan, South America, New Zealand--about 25 different countries.”

His favorite place is right here in the USA, though: Hawaii.

In his spare time, Patrick likes to “fool with” his iPod, iPad and his iPhone. His daughter said her dad has always loved gadgets.

He gets around pretty good for his age and still gets out and “maintains my yard.”

“But I’m working on 99 years and I’m thinking of retiring,” chuckles Patrick. “I think I might qualify as a senior citizen now.”

When all of his children moved out of state except his son, who lives in Mercer County, Patrick and his wife, now deceased, moved there too, and he’s lived there since.

“I’ve lived a good life—I’m still going, although I’ve slowed down a little bit.”

Anna Liza says she too is in pretty good health for her age, although she’s considered legally blind. She’s widowed now and lives in Northwood Apartments in Irvine.

“I have to be careful,” she said. “I don’t walk too fast anymore.”

Although Anna Liza is considered legally blind, she still has some peripheral vision and says she had no trouble recognizing her former school teacher.

“I could tell it was him,” she said.

She describes Hickman Patrick as being “a good teacher.” She recalls a field trip her class took to town. They visited the Irvine Herald, or the “print shop,” and they also visited the ice plant. The field trip was written up in the Irvine Herald, in the Nov. 1938 edition of the newspaper.

Patrick taught Anna Liza when she was in eighth grade, which was the last year she attended school.

“I never really even thought about going any further,” she said. “We just didn’t have a way to get there.”

Anna Liza got married in 1940 and moved to Cincinnati for a while, where she became a Reds fan. She eventually gave birth to four children, one now deceased.

Anna Liza would like to thank everyone who came to her party. “

I had a good time,” she said. “It was really neat.”

2 Chronicles 7:14

If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land.

ENCOURAGING WORD: A GUIDELINE FOR ALL ACTIVITIES

Howard Coop

Guest Columnist

In 1963, I was appointed to serve a congregation in northern Kentucky, an area about which I knew nothing. The only person I knew in that community was a retired pastor I considered to be a friend. The county-seat town had received national publicity; a nationally circulated magazine had designated it as “Sin City U. S. A.” Although I moved to that community with a great deal of apprehension, that appointment turned out to be a most pleasant experience.

On the day of our move to that community, we arrived sometime before the van bringing our furniture arrived. As we looked through the house to determine where things would go, the doorbell rang; my friend had come to welcome us. After an enthusiastic greeting, he insisted that we go to see a piece of property that had been acquired by the congregation as the site for a new church. He let me know that he was genuinely interested in getting that move underway.

“Just do something, anything,” he said, “to let ‘em know you mean business.”

In the first few months I was in that community, things moved rapidly: A building committee was appointed, discussions about design were lively, and an architect was hired. Then, one day my friend and I looked at the new property again.

He was even more anxious.

“Do something,” he said.

“Just dig a hole anywhere.”

On June 15, 1966, the first Sunday of my fourth year in that community, we met at the old church for a brief service of thanksgiving. Then, we placed the open Bible from the altar, the Christian flag, and the American flag in the hands of youth and marched through the streets of the city to the new building for the first service.

As I thought about those who just wanted to do something and the effort of those who planned and worked so diligently to get everything together properly, I remembered an ancient bit of wisdom that should be a guiding principle in all activities:

“But everything,” regardless of what it is, “should be done in a fitting and orderly way.”

- d. any matters which would be disclosed by an accurate survey or inspection of the property.

2. The sale shall be made to the highest and best bidder or bidders. The successful bidder shall pay cash or make a deposit of one-third (1/3) of the purchase price, with the balance on credit for thirty (30) days. Any purchaser, other than the Plaintiff, who does not pay cash in full, shall be required to execute a bond, with surety thereon acceptable to the Master Commissioner to secure the unpaid balance of the purchase price and sale bond shall bear interest at the rate of 12% per annum from the date of sale until paid, and shall have the same force and effect as a judgment and shall remain and be a lien on the property until paid. The purchasers shall have the privilege of paying all of the balance of the purchase price prior to the expiration of the thirty (30) day period.

3. The successful bidder at sale, at bidder’s own expense, may carry fire and extended insurance coverage on the improvements from the date of sale until the purchase price is fully paid, in an amount at least sufficient to cover a loss to the extent of the court appraised value of the improvements on the real estate or the unpaid balance of the purchase price is fully paid, in the amount whichever is less, with the loss payable clause to the Master Commissioner. Failure of the purchaser to effect such insurance coverage shall not affect the validity of the sale or the purchaser’s liability there under, but shall entitle, but not require, any party adjudicated an interest in the real estate, after giving notice to the Master Commissioner, to effect said insurance and furnish evidence of the policy to the Master Commissioner. The premium of the insurance policy shall then be charged to the purchaser as purchaser’s cost.

4. In the event the Plaintiff becomes the purchaser of the real estate at the Master Commissioner’s sale, and it the Plaintiff’s bid if less than its lien adjudged herein, Plaintiff may comply with the terms of sale by taking credit upon this Judgment without making the cash deposit or execution the sale bond as provided for in this Judgment.

A Kentucky Adventure by Leigh Anne Florence

Chapter 1

"Well, Woody, it looks as if all your numbers are higher than last year," the doctor said as he went over my test results.

"That's awesome!," I exclaimed, puffing out my chest.

Doc Albert chuckled before she spoke. "Actually Woody, it's not like exams in school where higher numbers mean better grades. With medical exams, higher numbers aren't usually a good thing."

"I don't understand," I said, looking back and forth from my parents to the doctor.

"Well, your blood sugar, your cholesterol and your weight are all higher than they were last year. Those three things tell me you aren't eating right or exercising enough. And for you to be healthy, that has to change."

I felt a tear come to my eye, but I didn't want to cry in front of my parents, my sister or the vet, so I played it cool.

"I must have allergies too," I said, wiping my eyes and drying my sniffles.

"It's not the end of the world, and you're certainly not in trouble, Woody," Doc Albert assured me. "It's a wake-up call. It's your body telling you to treat it better."

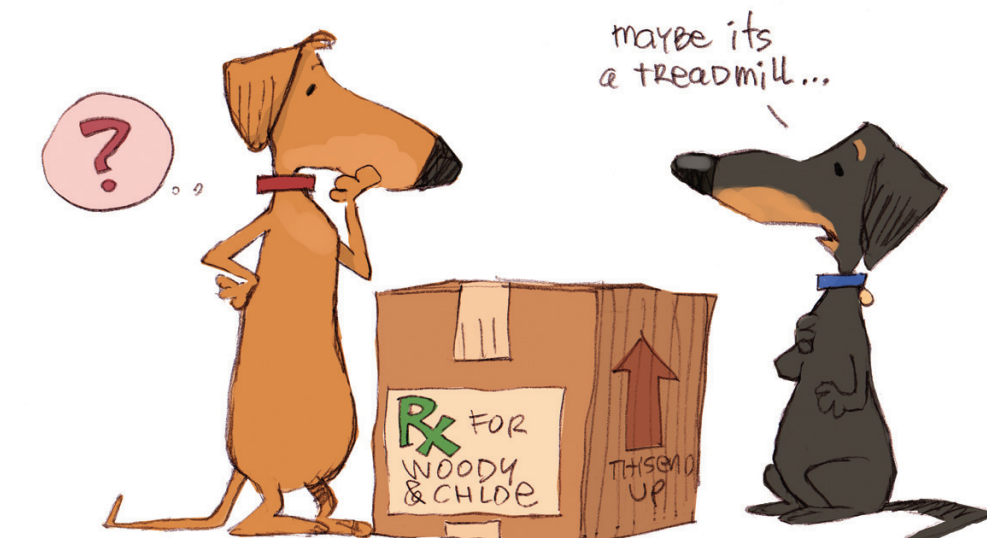

"What did you score on your tests, Chloe?," I asked my sister.

Doc Albert answered for her. "Though Chloe hasn't gained any weight, her cholesterol and her blood sugar were also a tiny bit higher than last year."

"What is co, co..."

"Cholesterol," Doc Albert said, trying to help Chloe pronounce the difficult word.

"Yes, cholesterol," Chloe repeated. "What is it?"

I was wondering about that, too, so I was happy my sister had asked.

"Cholesterol is a waxy, fatlike substance made in the liver and other cells and found in foods like eggs and meat," Doc Albert explained. "Our body needs cholesterol to work properly, but if we get too much cholesterol it can clog up our arteries and make it harder for our heart to pump blood."

I thought about my eating habits and all the times I helped Chloe finish her dinner. Then I thought about my favorite foods: Vanilla Woofers, pupicles, popcorn, puparoni pizza, bacon, ice cream, pudding pups, meat, cheese, eggs, the very thing Doc Albert said was filled with cholesterol.

"Sure I have a hearty appetite, but I'm a busy guy," I said to my doctor, trying to convince my parents and myself. "How many other black and tan wiener dogs from Kentucky do you know who write books and travel around the beautiful Bluegrass State with their wiener dog sister and Mom and Dad? Have you ever met another dachshund who spends his days in schools and libraries talking to children and adults about keeping a positive attitude, being respectful and working hard to achieve their goals? I work hard and I need my strength to keep going. I need food to run just like a car needs gasoline to run," I said, proud of my point, hoping it didn't come off as disrespectful.

"That's a great point," Doc Albert said. "But would you fill your car up with apple juice or water?"

"Of course not!" I answered as we all laughed. "It wouldn't run, silly."

"Well, the food you are putting in your body is just like filling your car up with apple juice. It might fill the tank, but you won't go anywhere," Doc explained.

As valid as I thought my argument was, Doc Albert made a much stronger point.

"Sit tight while I get your prescriptions ready, pups," Doc ordered as she left the exam room. I hoped the medicine wasn't some nasty, smelly stuff that made me hold my nose so I could swallow it.

Doc Albert returned carrying a large brown cardboard box, securely taped, that was bigger than Chloe and me. "Here you go, pups," Doc said as she handed the box to Dad. The top of the box read "Rx for Woody and Chloe. Take as directed"

"What does Rx mean?" I asked, trying to pronounce the word that didn't have a vowel in the middle of it.

"Rx is an abbreviation for medical prescription," Mom explained. "And you know what a prescription is. It's a recipe for getting well."

I didn't know what was in the box, but one thing was for sure. It was the biggest recipe I had ever seen.
